Hamdan Proposes Targeted Border Funding After 326 Arrests in San Luaso

BACON COUNTY, Ga. — Constitution Party presidential candidate Adam Hamdan is calling on Congress to include 200 additional immigration case-processing personnel in any new border-security funding package following the arrest of 326 people near San Luaso. His proposal would support enforcement by helping officials verify identities, review immigration records, and prepare cases for lawful decisions within 60 days of initial processing.

Authorities reported that the arrests were part of a national crackdown on illegal immigration. Some individuals were accused of homicide, robbery, human smuggling, and narcotics trafficking. Many of those arrested were seeking employment in nearby agricultural fields. Hamdan's proposed staffing increase is intended to help officials process immigration cases accurately and without unnecessary delays. Criminal allegations would be referred to the appropriate authorities, while immigration violations would be addressed through the applicable legal procedures. He supports ICE enforcing immigration laws and carrying out lawful removal orders.

His response draws on the Constitution Party's support for secure borders, immigration screening, and the protection of states and their residents. Hamdan would seek cooperation between federal immigration officials and border states to address unlawful entry and threats to public safety.

Although Hamdan opposes federal overreach, he considers border protection a legitimate government responsibility. Under his "Secure Life, Secure Liberty" message, limited government means carrying out its proper duties while respecting the boundaries of its authority. He therefore supports funding for enforcement without granting agencies unrestricted power. Hamdan recognizes that seeking agricultural work is not proof of a violent crime. However, he maintains that employment needs do not excuse immigration violations. Pointing to the Fifth Amendment's due-process principle, he says officials must follow the procedures required in each case and distinguish criminal accusations from immigration status.

"When cases pile up, due process breaks down," Hamdan said. "My administration would give immigration officials the resources to do their job lawfully and efficiently—protecting the border and respecting the Constitution."
